The theme of this conference is literacy and numeracy strategies that can be used in a library setting. The day will begin with the SLARI AGM.

Following this Conor Kostick will give a workshop on how creative writing can work with students. This will be presented in the way that it would be to students in a school setting. After a coffee break the focus will turn to other subjects and topics that can be promoted in the library, among these Maths/Science, History and games. Michael Moylan will speak about Irish History Live and how this works in promoting History to students. Christine Campbell from Anyone4Maths will speak about her Maths and Science workshops. School librarians from SLARI will talk about initiatives that work in their libraries. There will also be a display of games available for delegates to look at and try out.
